Swift Action Urged for Bailout

Congressional Democrats seek revisions before passing bill

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration insisted Sunday that Congress must move quickly to approve what one lawmaker called the "mother of all bailouts" — a $700 billion proposal to buy a mountain of bad mortgage debt in an effort to unfreeze the nation's credit markets.

Congressional leaders endorsed the plan's main thrust, saying passage might occur in a matter of days. But they said it must be expanded to include help for people on Main Street as well as the big Wall Street financial firms who have lost billions of dollars through their bad investment decisions.

The proposal "does not include the necessary safeguards," said House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif. She called for "independent oversight, protections for homeowners and constraints on excessive executive compensation."

Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson stressed that time was critical to get the proposal passed and that changes to the administration's measure, which was sent to lawmakers Saturday, could delay that approval, further unsettling global financial markets, which have already seen a number of stomach-churning days as the result of the biggest upheaval on Wall Street since the Great Depression. Woman Now Hated By Several Wives

Here's a tip: Bartending nude can get you arrested. Sheriff's deputies doing a routine check this week at a southern Illinois bar say they discovered a not-so-routine sight. Authorities allege that 33-year-old Janet Brannon was naked while serving bar patrons at the Cabin Tavern in Delhi. Brannon was arrested and charged with misdemeanor public indecency. She was freed on $8,000 bond. She was the only bar employee working at the time, so the tavern was closed Thursday. (AP)

TERRIBLE IDEAS

Honda Marketing Staffers' Careers Are Paved Over

Residents of Lancaster, Calif., are not grooving to this music. City officials said this week that they're paving over a quarter-mile strip of asphalt grooved to play the William Tell Overture when auto tires speed over it. The road was completed this month as part of an ad campaign for Honda. It's engineered to play the overture at perfect pitch for motorists driving Honda Civics at 55 mph. But neighbors can't stand the noise. (AP)

STUNTS

The Line Is Definitely Towed

Nearly 300 tow trucks rumbled through New York City on Saturday in an attempt to smash the world record for the largest parade of its kind. Organizers think they hit the mark, with 292 trucks participating. The procession included flatbeds, wreckers and 50-ton rotators. The trucks departed from Shea Stadium in Queens and cruised down a couple highways before finishing on an abandoned airport tarmac to spell out "New York." The previous world record was a parade of 83 tow trucks in August 2004 in Washington state. (AP)

McCain Focuses on Leadership

Republican claims Obama puts ambition ahead of the country

BALTIMORE | Republican presidential nominee John McCain told an audience Sunday that Barack Obama behaved more like a politician than a leader, both on matters of national security and on last week's near-meltdown of the U.S. financial system.

Addressing a meeting of the National Guard Association, McCain faulted Obama for not offering a plan to stabilize financial markets.

"At a time of crisis, when leadership is needed, Senator Obama has not provided it," McCain said.

At a rally in Charlotte, N.C., on Sunday, Obama criticized the Bush administration's $700 billion proposal, calling it a "concept with a staggering price tag, not a plan." Yet he said the government had little option but to intervene.

McCain, meanwhile, renewed his criticism of Obama for opposing last year's troop buildup in Iraq.

"Whether it's a reversal in war or an economic emergency, he reacts as a politician and not as a leader, seeking an advantage for himself instead of a solution for his country," McCain said of his Democratic rival. (AP)

Wall Street Braces for a Recession

Many investors believe the worst is ahead for the nation's economy

NEW YORK | The Dow Jones industrial average may be almost exactly where it was a week ago, but Wall Street is a completely different place.

In a matter of days, Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. went into bankruptcy, Merrill Lynch & Co. was snapped up by Bank of America Corp., and American International Group Inc. was bailed out by the government. One big mutual fund broke the buck, and another was shut down. And now, the government is planning to assume banks' risky assets.

Overall, investors are relieved about the intervention. But they remain quite cautious about the outlook for the financial markets and the economy. Those who remember the savings and loan crisis of the late 1980s will recall that it was followed by about three years of recession, noted John O'Donoghue, co-head of equities at Cowen & Co.

"If we're not in one, we will be in one," O'Donoghue said, adding that a government rescue of the banks will not prevent them from tightening their lending standards further. When people and businesses have a hard time getting loans, it tends to stunt economic growth.

The belief among investors that the anemic economy could worsen before it improves could keep the stock market jittery for a while until it sees real signs of strength in the economy. MADLEN READ (AP)

KENOSHA, WIS. | HELICOPTER CRASH KILLS 2

CRASH SITE: Officials investigate the scene of a helicopter crash at a house in Kenosha, Wis., on Sunday. A helicopter plowed into the residence at about 5:30 a.m., killing two people in the aircraft. Police said the five people in the house at the time were not injured. Fog was reported in the area at the time, but the cause of the crash was not immediately known.

Obama to Prep In Fla. This Week For First Debate

CHARLOTTE, N.C. | Democratic presidential nominee Barack Obama will undergo three days of preparation this week for a crucial foreign policy clash with Republican John McCain in the first debate of the general election campaign.

Aides say it will be an opportunity for Obama to demonstrate proficiency in an area where polls have shown voters give the edge to McCain. Obama will head to Florida to prepare for Friday's event at the University of Mississippi.

If Obama can hold his own on foreign policy, it could ease those worries, aides said Sunday as they tried to lower expectations for the first-term Illinois senator. (AP) abuse probe in Ark.

Kids Taken From Church

6 children in custody

FOUKE, ARK. | Six children have been placed temporarily in state custody as part of a child-abuse investigation after a raid on an evangelical compound in southwest Arkansas, officials said Sunday.

State police spokesman Bill Sadler said the children will be in the custody of the Arkansas Department of Human Services as investigators conduct interviews with them.

"Should there be any long-term separation of the children from the Alamo property, a local court will make the determination as to the status of those children," Sadler said in a statement.

A man patrols Tony Alamo Christian Church in Fouke, Ark., on Sunday.

The move comes after a raid Saturday by more than 100 federal and state police at Tony Alamo Christian Ministries in the rural town of Fouke. Investigators said their two-year investigation into child-abuse and pornography allegations focused on convicted tax evader Tony Alamo and his ministry, described as a cult by its critics.

The police search ended after midnight Saturday, and Sadler said officials had no plans to search the buildings again.

Alamo claimed in a telephone interview Saturday the investigation was part of a federal push to legalize same-sex marriage while outlawing polygamy. He also said that "consent is puberty" when it comes to sex with young girls.

U.S. Attorney Bob Balfe declined to comment when asked whether an arrest warrant had been issued for Alamo. Balfe said before the raid that he expected a warrant would be issued for the 74-year-old leader. Prosecutors once labeled Alamo as a polygamist who preys on girls and women. JON GAMBRELL (AP)

For Some, Election Is Already Over

Voters in many states are filling out ballots weeks before Nov. 4

WASHINGTON | Election Day will be something of an afterthought for tens of millions of Americans — they'll be voting well ahead of time.

In fact, six weeks out from Election Day, some voters in Kentucky, South Carolina and Virginia already are done.

Nationwide, about a third of the electorate is expected to vote early this year, thanks to expanded early voting provisions and fewer restrictions on absentee voting. In all, more than 30 states allow any registered voter to cast an early ballot, some in person and others by mail.

Greg Dearing of Louisville, Ky.,

Gerry Biasioli signs up to vote at the Urban Government Center in Louisville, Ky., on Thursday. Some in Kentucky, South Carolina and Virginia have already voted.

locked in his ballot for Sen. Barack Obama on Thursday.

"I'm usually a straight party voter," Dearing said. "It would take something very far-fetched to make me regret my vote."

The early voting trend is fundamentally changing political races.

Early voting has increased in recent years: In 2004, 22 percent of voters cast an early presidential ballot; in 2000, 16 percent voted early.

It's a trend that is fundamentally changing the home stretch of American political campaigns. October surprises? They'd better come in September if campaigns want to influence every vote.

"You can't hold your big guns right to the end," said Paul Gronke, director of the Early Voting Information Center at Reed College in Oregon. "When up to 25 or 30 percent of the electorate has already cast a ballot, it might not be wise to wait until the last minute" to make a game-changing play for votes.

Both presidential campaigns are pressing their supporters to vote early. In past elections, the GOP has had a formidable "72-hour" program for getting voters to the polls.

"What we have now is the 720-hour program," said Rich Beeson, political director for the Republican National Committee, which is coordinating get-out-the-vote efforts for Sen. John McCain's campaign.

Obama's campaign is also targeting potential early voters.

"We do everything we can to make sure our supporters know all the options available to them," said Jon Carson, Obama's national field director. "We've been building a massive ground game for all of this." (AP)

Israeli PM Formally Quits Post

Unpopular Olmert leaves foreign minister to form government

JERUSALEM | Israeli Foreign Minister Tzipi Livni wasted no time Sunday working to put together a new government, meeting with potential coalition partners even as outgoing Prime Minister Ehud Olmert formally resigned. Her ability to move fast in her first task could have far-reaching effects on Mideast peace talks.

Livni, who has gained respect for favoring peace deals with the Palestinians and Syria while distancing herself from the unpopular Olmert, would become Israel's second female prime minister after Golda Meir, who served from 1969 to 1974.

A former lawyer and one-time agent in the Mossad spy agency, Livni has 42 days to form a government.

Olmert remains in office until a new government is approved by the parliament, and he has pledged to press ahead with peace efforts as long as he is premier.

Olmert told his Cabinet on Sunday morning that he would resign and followed that with a visit to the official Jerusalem residence of President Shimon Peres — both formalities in a process that began in late July, when Olmert caved under the pressure of corruption probes.

"This decision was not easy, it was not simple, and it was not taken in an offhanded way," Olmert said Sunday. MARK LAVIE (AP)

Militants Eyed in Islamabad Attack

Officials say Taliban, al-Qaeda likely behind deadly hotel bombing

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Taliban militants based near the Afghan border and their al-Qaeda allies are the most likely suspects behind a massive truck bombing at Islamabad's Marriott Hotel, officials and experts said Sunday. At least 53 died in the explosion, including two U.S.

Defense Department employees and the Czech ambassador.

The truck sat burning and disabled at the hotel gate for at least 3½ minutes as nervous guards tried to douse the flames before they, the truck and much of the hotel forecourt vanished in a fearsome fireball on Saturday night, according to dramatic surveillance footage released Sunday.

The attack — among the deadliest terrorist strikes in Pakistan — on the American hotel chain during Ramadan will test the resolve of its pro-Western civilian rulers to crack down on violent extremism, which many here blame on Pakistan's role in the U.S.-led war on terror.

While no group has claimed responsibility, the scale of the blast and its high-profile target were seen by many as being led by al-Qaeda.

Mahmood Shah, a former government security chief for Pakistan's tribal areas, said that while the attack had "all the signatures" of an al-Qaeda strike, homegrown Taliban militants probably had learned how to execute an attack of such magnitude.

Al-Qaeda was providing "money, motivation, direction and all sort of leadership and using the Taliban as gun fodder," he suggested.

A Pakistani intelligence official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said investigators were examining just that theory. STEPHEN GRAHAM (AP)

Slovenia Vote Is Too Close to Call

LJUBLJANA, SLOVENIA | Slovenia's opposition Social Democrats held a razor-thin lead over the ruling center-right party of Premier Janez Jansa in parliamentary elections Sunday, nearly complete results showed. But the vote was too close to predict the outcome with certainty.

The Social Democrat leader, Borut Pahor — who, with his two certain allied parties is close to winning a majority in Parliament — called his party's results a "success," but did not declare victory. (AP)

The Hong Kong government also announced Sunday that tests found melamine in Chinese-made Nestle milk. The Dairy Farm milk was made by Nestle's division in Qingdao, China, it said.

The Swiss food and drinks giant issued a statement Sunday saying that none of its China-made dairy products contained melamine.

Meanwhile, Singapore said Sunday melamine was detected in samples of White Rabbit-brand Creamy Candy. COTT McDONALD (AP)

President tells nation he has quit post after pressure from rivals

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA | South African President Thabo Mbeki told the nation Sunday that he had resigned, relinquishing the leadership of the continent's powerhouse to bitter rivals who hounded him out of office after nine years.

In a televised speech, Mbeki said he had handed a letter of resignation to the speaker of Parliament, Baleka Mbete. He said he would step down at a date to be determined by the National Assembly.

Parliament will convene in the coming days to select an interim president to serve until elections, which are scheduled for next year. Mbete — who is also chairwoman Mbeki, 66, lost the final battle Saturday in a long-running struggle against Zuma, his former deputy. He came under pressure to quit after a judge threw out a corruption case against Zuma earlier this month and implied that Mbeki's administration had put political pressure on prosecutors.

Mbeki said "categorically" he had never interfered in the work of prosecutors. CLARE NULLIS (AP)

Gulf's First Ladies Pioneer Change

Rulers' wives become leaders in conservative Muslim countries

DOHA, QATAR | The first lady of this conservative Muslim sheikdom walked up to the podium in a luxury hotel banquet room and sized up the crowd of mostly wealthy businessmen. "Do not be afraid to take risks and to try," she told them. "Think out of the box."

Sheika Mozah bint Nasser al-Missned may have been wearing a traditional black head scarf and robe, but she took on a very untraditional role in rallying the men to support a $100 million initiative to tackle unemployment. Like her counterpart in Dubai, Oxford-educated Princess Haya, Mozah is taking up the Western "first lady"

Sheika Mozah bint Nasser al-Missned, one of the wives of Qatar's Sheik Hamad bin Khalifa Al Thani, has taken up the Western "first lady" model as a leader.

It's a major change in a region where a ruler's wife is rarely seen and even her name is little known.

model — as a globe-trotting activist who is involved in public affairs.

It's a major change in a region where a ruler's wife is rarely seen and even her name is little known. She might be one of several; many emirs and kings in the Gulf have multiple wives — up to the four permitted by Islam, though sometimes the actual number is not well known.

The emergence of high-ranking wives on the public stage is part of the booming Gulf states' efforts to appear more in synch with the West as they seek investments, political clout and even big-name sporting events like the Olympics. It's also clearly a competition with other high-profile Middle East women, such as Jordan's Queen Rania.

Mozah, who is believed to be in her 40s, is one of Sheik Hamad bin Khalifa Al Thani's wives. Her most prominent role is chairwoman of the Qatar Foundation, which launched Education City, a 2,500-acre campus outside Doha and home to branches of prominent American universities like Carnegie Mellon and Georgetown.

"No Gulf royalty stands out as Mozah does," said Rima Sabban, a Dubai-based sociologist. "She broke all cultural barriers and shaped an image of a woman that is fully modern, fully confident and fearless of a backlash from the society."

Kodachrome's Demise

Traditional film brand could be extinguished by digital technology

DINOSAUR | It is an elaborately crafted photographic film, extolled for its sharpness, vivid colors and archival durability. Yet die-hard fan Alex Webb is convinced the digital age soon will take his Kodachrome away.

"Part of me feels like, 'Boy, if only I'd been born 20 years earlier,'" says the 56-year-old photographer, whose work has appeared in National Geographic magazine. "I wish they would keep making it forever. I still have a lot of pictures to take in my life."

Only one commercial lab in the world, Dwayne's Photo in Parsons, Kan., still develops Kodachrome, a once-ubiquitous brand that has freeze-framed the world in rich but authentic hues since it was introduced in the Great Depression.

A roll of Kodachrome 64 film is loaded into a camera. The brand used to be the standard choice for professional color photography but is now nearing extinction.

Eastman Kodak Co. now makes the slide and motion-picture film in just one 35mm format, and production runs — in which a master sheet nearly a mile long is cut up into more than 20,000 rolls — fall at least a year apart.

Kodak won't say when the last one occurred nor will it hint at Kodachrome's prospects. Kodachrome stocks currently on sale have a 2009 expiration date. If the machines aren't fired up again, the company might just sell out the remaining supplies, and that would be the end.

"It's a low-volume product; all volumes [of color film] are down," says spokesman Chris Veronda.

For decades, Kodachrome was the standard choice for professional color photography and avant-garde filmmaking. At its peak, a reverential Paul Simon crooned "Mama, don't take my Kodachrome away" in 1973.

During its mass-market heyday in the 1960s and '70s, countless snapshooters put friendships in peril every time they hauled out a carousel projector and trays of slides to replay a family vacation. But the landmark color-transparency created by Leopold Godowsky Jr. and Leopold Mannes — "God and Man" in photo research circles — went into a tailspin a generation ago. It was eclipsed by video, easy-to-process color negative films and a tidal-wave preference for hand-sized prints.

Nowadays, Kodachrome is confined to a small global market of devotees who wouldn't settle for anything else. And before long, industry watchers say, Kodak might well stop serving that steadily shrinking niche as the 128-year-old photography pioneer bets its future on electronic imaging.

Steve McCurry's portrait of an Afghan refugee girl with haunting gray-green eyes that landed on the cover of National Geographic in 1985 is considered one of the finest illustrations of the film's subtle rendering of light, contrast and color harmony.

"You just look at it and think, 'This is better than life,'" says McCurry, 58, who has relied heavily on Kodachrome for all but the last two years of a 33-year career.

John Larish, a consultant and writer on photography, marvels at its staying power. "I've got Kodachromes from the 1930s, and the blue skies look as bright as they did in the 1930s," he says. BEN DOBBIN (AP)

D.C. Vote Tallies Examined

Officials seek source of discrepancies in Sept. 9 primary tallies

As District officials continue to investigate errors in the early vote tallies from the Sept. 9 primary, one number stands out: 1,542.

That number appeared in the category for "over votes" in 13 races when the D.C. Board of Elections and Ethics released early results on election night. But those votes inexplicably vanished shortly after midnight when officials posted what they identified as corrected results.

The appearance of an identical number of over votes in multiple races creates further mystery and new doubts about the election as the board faces a Wednesday deadline to certify the results. In fact, the board and a special D.C. Council committee are still investigating why thousands of phantom write-in votes turned up in the initial election tallies.

An over vote occurs when a person selects more than one candidate in a single race on a paper ballot, thus nullifying the vote. On election night, the early tallies included a listing for over votes for each race, even when the number was zero. But in its posted results, the elections board removed the categories for over votes and under votes — which indicate that voters did not select a candidate — from 32 of the 46 races.

Cheh

What happened to those numbers?

"It will be in our report," said Dan Murphy, an elections board spokesman. The November general election is expected to draw large numbers of voters, and some council members want residents to be confident about the process.

"I can say one thing. It underscores the need for the investigation," said Council Chairman Vincent C. Gray, a Democrat. "This could affect this election and future elections."

Council member Mary Cheh, D-Ward 3, chairman of the special committee, said: "One trail often leads to others, and this will be on the agenda to look at."

She has issued a subpoena for documents from Sequoia Voting Systems, the California-based company that supplies the District with its voting equipment and software.

The elections board initially blamed the discrepancies on a single defective computer memory cartridge in Precinct 141, a polling site on U Street NW that serves voters from the Dupont Circle neighborhood in Ward 2.

Sequoia has said the cartridge was not defective and suggested that tabulation errors may have been triggered by workers or by a static or electrical discharge.

Metro is overhauling the office in charge of the SmarTrip fare cards, after audits found that contractor and management failures have led to delays in card upgrades.

Metro to Overhaul SmarTrip Office

Metro is overhauling the office in charge of the popular SmarTrip electronic fare cards after internal audits found that failures by the main contractor and agency managers have added at least $2 million in costs and at least three years in delays for long-awaited, customer-friendly features.

Continuing software issues and the office shake-up have slowed the project even more. As a result, features to make the plastic card more convenient and versatile, which were supposed to be ready next month, will not be working until 2010, officials said.

By then, the card is supposed to be able to compute all bus and rail fares and special passes that Metro and regional transit partners offer, such as Virginia Railway Express' Transit Link Card, Metrorail's seven-day Fast Pass and Montgomery County's Ride-On monthly pass. The passes provide discounts, and many riders use them to save money.

Riders also will have to wait until 2010 before they can automatically add money to their cards, the way drivers do with the popular E-ZPass electronic toll payment system.

Riders have been repeatedly promised these features by officials from Metro and Cubic Transportation Systems, which has been paid nearly $15 million to upgrade SmarTrip hardware and software and fare collection equipment, with few results. Metro General Manager John B. Catoe Jr. acknowledged the problems with Cubic and agency management, but said he took immediate action to overhaul SmarTrip and tighten oversight to ensure the work gets done.

10 | The number of consecutive games in which the Arizona Cardinals had scored more than 20 points before scoring just 17 against the Redskins on Sunday. That streak was the longest in the NFL.

PRESTON KERES / TWP

RETURN MAN: Redskins cornerback Carlos Rogers, center, returns an interception 42 yards in the fourth quarter, setting up the game-winning pass to Santana Moss, who has now caught TDs in six straight games.

Redskins Win 2nd Straight at Home

Rogers' interception in the 4th quarter sets up game-winning TD

REDSKINS | Even Leigh Torrence wasn't sure how he deflected the ball. He got a piece of it with his hand, he thought. Maybe it then bounced off his helmet.

What really matters is that he was there, swinging the tide with a solid defensive play in the fourth quarter. He kept pace with Steve Breaston deep over the middle and caused Kurt Warner's pass to bounce high into the air and into the hands of diving teammate Carlos Rogers, who ran 42 yards to the 15-yard line.

Two plays later, Santana Moss scored on a 17-yard receiver screen with 12:10 remaining, giving the Washington Redskins a 24-17 victory over the Arizona Cardinals.

They were two teams stingy with turnovers in their first two games, and the team that kept that reputation intact came out the winner.

Jason Campbell completed 23 of 31 passes, including his first eight, for 193 yards with two touchdowns, and he hasn't thrown an interception this season.

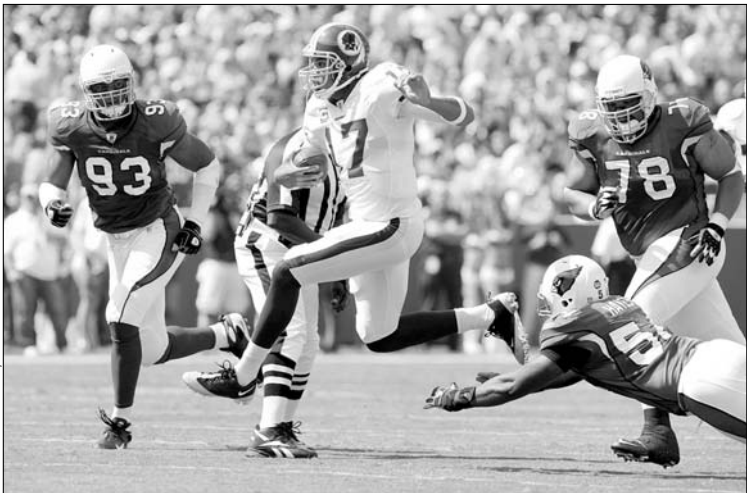

Clinton Portis ran 21 times for 68 yards and scored a touchdown on the opening drive for the Redskins (2-1), who have only one lost fumble in three games and have won two straight for coach Jim Zorn since a sputtering start against the New York Giants in week 1.

"After the game against the Giants, we said that the next two games were must-wins," tight end Chris Cooley said. "This was a huge win. I think that if we continue winning, we will look back and say that this was when we became a good team."

The Cardinals (2-1) had been looking to go 3-0 for the first time since 1974, but they committed their first giveaways of the season and ended a 10-game streak in which they scored 20 or more points.

Arizona fell behind twice but both times managed to come back and tie the game. At 17-17 in the fourth quarter, they felt good about their chances until Torrence stuck his arm over Breaston's shoulder and sent the ball flying. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

JONATHAN NEWTON / TWP

FAST START: Jason Campbell scrambles for a first down during the first drive of the game, setting up a touchdown by Clinton Portis that put Washington up early.

Report CARD

- Best Call: Just like last week, Zorn came out strong when he had a chance to ice the game, throwing to Chris Cooley on 2nd-and-7 on the first play after the two-minute warning. It worked again.
 - Worst Call: Larry Fitzgerald's 62-yard touchdown catch was a bit of poor zone playing by safety Reed Doughty. That big play was a blemish on an otherwise good day.
 - Best Adjustment: For the second week in a row, the Redskins were the superior team in the fourth quarter. Trend?
- B The offense was solid, and holding Arizona to 17 points is no small task.

Dolphins End Pats' Win Streak

38 | 13

NFL | Ronnie Brown and the Miami Dolphins ended the Patriots' record winning streak and made New England's defense look as shaky as its Tom Brady-less offense.

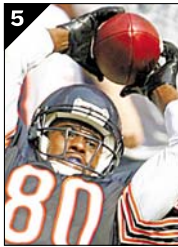

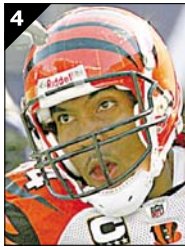

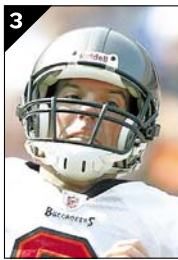

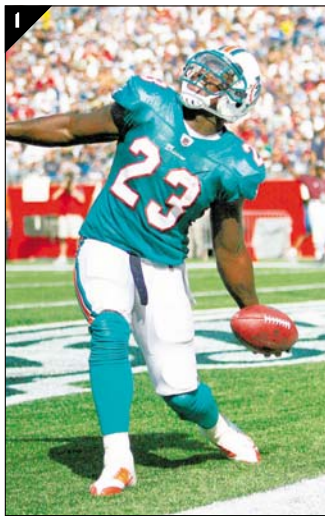

Brown scored a team-record four touchdowns rushing and threw for another — with four of the scores coming on direct snaps to the running back — as Miami (1-2) stunned New England (2-1) 38-13 Sunday.

After three rushing touchdowns in the first half, Brown took a direct snap in the third quarter and threw a left-handed pass to Anthony Fasano for a 19-yard touchdown, opening a 28-6 lead that the Patriots were unable to close.

He clinched only the second Dolphin victory in 22 games by tricking the Pats with another direct snap that he carried 62 yards to the final touchdown. The Dolphins outgained the Patriots 461 yards to 216.

The loss ended the Patriots' run of 21 straight regular-season wins and their chance for a second unbeaten regular season. HOWARD ULMAN (AP)

Jags Get 1st Win With Late Field Goal vs. Colts

NFL | Josh Scobee proved Jacksonville's traditional formula still works.

After wearing out the Indy defense on the ground, Scobee saved the game — and perhaps the season — by making a 51-yard field goal with four seconds left to give the Jaguars a 23-21 victory, their first in Indy since 2004.

It didn't look like Jacksonville (1-2) would need Scobee's boot after consuming more than 12 minutes on a marathon drive to open the fourth quarter capped by Scobee's 21-yarder for a 20-14 lead with 2:33 left.

Peyton Manning nearly pulled off his second improbable comeback in two weeks. The two-time league MVP needed just 1:26 to take the Colts 77 yards before giving the ball to Joseph Addai for a two-yard TD run with 1:07 to go.

David Garrard followed that with his best impersonation of Manning.

He repeatedly slithered his way through Indy's pass rush to buy time, find open receivers and lay the ball in perfectly.

SPANISH KINGS: The U.S.' reign as Davis Cup champion ended Sunday, with an ailing Rafael Nadal beating Andy Roddick in a straight-sets victory that sent Spain to the final for the sixth time.

Americans Win Ryder Cup

U.S. underdogs pull off upset of 3-time Cup champion Europe

GOLF | Strong as a team, strong as individuals, the American team rode the emotion of its two Kentucky players and the home crowd on Sunday to win the Ryder Cup for the first time since 1999.

Native son Kenny Perry was part of an early boost that swung momentum toward the Americans. Then fellow Kentuckian J.B. Holmes blasted drives to birdie his last two holes and put the United States in position for victory.

Hunter Mahan also helped push the team past the Europeans, tying a U.S. record by winning 3½ points as a captain's pick, courtesy of Paul Azinger, and was the only player to play all five matches at Valhalla without losing.

On the other side, Europe disappointed as stars Sergio Garcia, Lee Westwood and Pádraig Harrington failed to win a match all week.

PARTY LIKE IT'S 1999: Anthony Kim, left, and Paul Azinger celebrate as the U.S. clinches its first Ryder Cup victory since 1999. Kim beat Sergio Garcia for one point.

The Ryder Cup was clinched with a handshake when Miguel Angel Jimenez conceded a short par putt to Jim Furyk, giving the Americans the 14½ points they needed to end the streak of three straight European victories. Dressed in red shirts — the Sunday color of Tiger Woods, who could only watch from home while recovering from knee surgery — the Americans erupted into hugs and tears behind the 17th green.

Ben Curtis and Chad Campbell won the final two matches for a lopsided score of United States 16½, Europe 11½. DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

The Woman in Her

Lila Downs shook off the evil and met her feminine self

UPHILL FROM HERE | Lila Downs is an artist who always seemed to have her act together. The Mexican-American singer has a stunning voice, a confident multicultural vision grounded in her Indian roots and a successful 15-year career in global music circles.

What she doesn't have is a child.

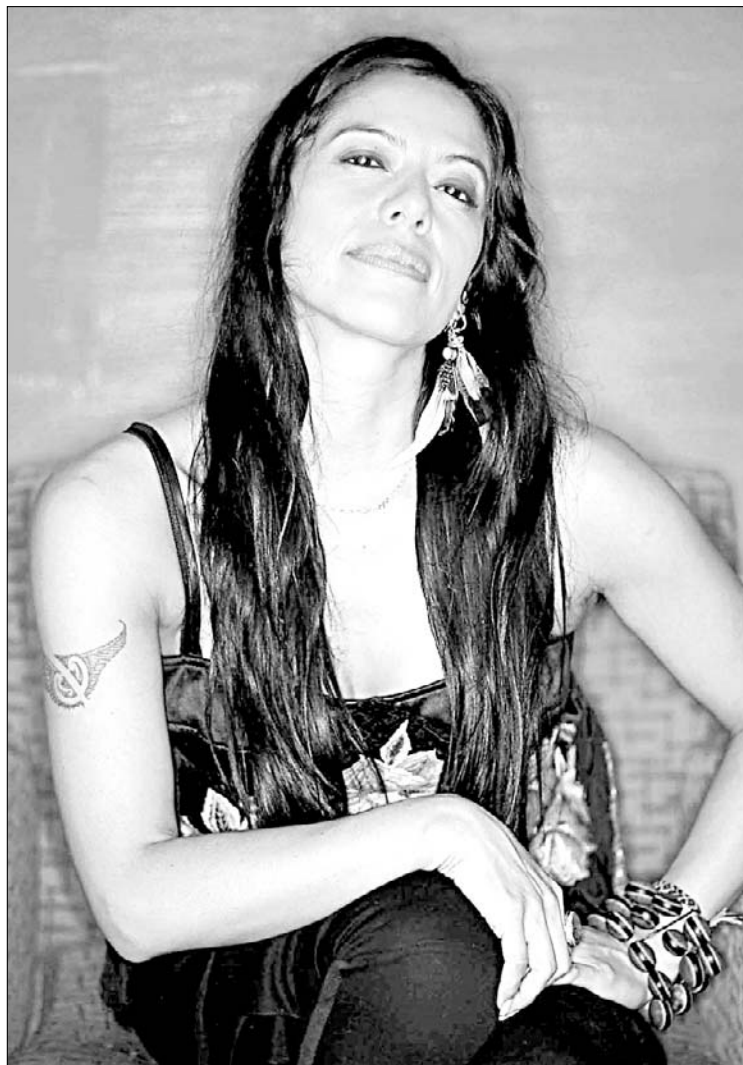

Downs faced her inability to conceive as she approached her 40th birthday in September. Depressed and drinking, she fell apart.

"What ... the hell am I doing in this life if I can't have children?" she asked herself. "That's the whole point of living as a woman."

Back home in her beloved Oaxaca, the deteriorating political situation wracked by a violent teachers strike two years ago made matters worse. As a champion of her culture, she felt powerless and angry, and she started taking it out on her band.

"The devil came out in me," recalled Downs.

Today, Downs has won her fight with the devil. She laughs frequently, even while discussing personal problems. She dresses in a sexier way, and she's started plucking eyebrows that she used to keep thick, a la artist Frida Kahlo, without realizing the look made her feel manly, even fearsome.

DEAL WITH THE DEVIL, BROKEN: After going through a decidedly rough patch, Lila Downs turned to folk remedies to help heal physically, emotionally and spiritually.

But Downs' biggest transformation is in her music.

Her new album, "Shake Away," marks a pinnacle in her attempts to find a natural fusion of disparate strains of music and different sides of herself. The title tells you where she is. She took that evil and shook it off.

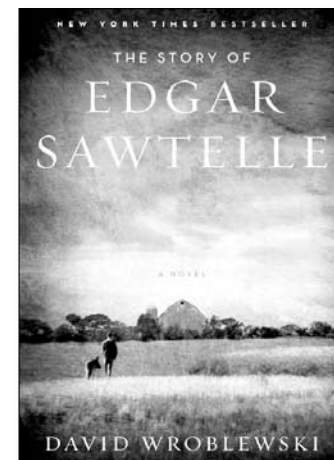

Her previous album makes more sense now, too.

"La Cantina" (2006) was a collection of Mexican "rancheras," drinking songs for brokenhearted people. "From the cantina to the cure" — that's a line she's using to describe what has happened to her between albums.

The "cure" refers, in part, to the healing she underwent with a "curandera" from Oaxaca, Dona Queta. The famed folk healer prescribed herbal teas and massage to awaken her femininity.

"I really did feel better physically after Queta gave me those teas," said Downs. "She knows the connection between the physical, the emotional and the spiritual, and that's something you will not find in the scientific world."

'Sawtelle' Granted Entry

David Wroblewski gets love from book club queen Oprah

MEMBERSHIP | Oprah Winfrey announced Friday she'd chosen David Wroblewski's "The Story of Edgar Sawtelle" as her latest book club pick, calling the debut novel a classic and the "best novel I've read in a long, long, long time."

"I think this book is right up there with the greatest American novels ever written, I really do," said Winfrey at the end of "The Oprah Winfrey Show." Winfrey raved for several minutes about the novel, comparing it to the work of John Steinbeck and even, she said, to the work of Harper Lee, author of "To Kill a Mockingbird."

"I will say that; yes, I said it," Winfrey said.

The novel is already one of the hottest reads these days and this week is ranked ninth on the New York Times best-seller list.

"Edgar Sawtelle," which Wroblewski worked on for about a decade, is the story of a mute boy who communicates best with his dogs. Wroblewski grew up in rural Wisconsin, the setting for his book, and now lives near Denver with his partner, writer Kimberly McClintock. DON BABWIN (AP)

Brady Sings — No Joke

A popular comedian shows off his vocal chords with success

MUSIC | The idea of Wayne Brady putting out a solid R&B record may be funny, but "A Long Time Coming" proves to be serious.

The production team the Heavyweights (Destiny's Child, Martina McBride) assist on the set of 12 soulful tunes that will have fans of urban contemporary music and soft rock extremely satisfied.

The Emmy Award-winning TV personality and comedian sings about love and relationships on his debut CD, from non-materialistic beauty ("All Naturally") to the album's first single, "Ordinary," about a simple, average love.

Though Brady successfully delivers his own sound, his reinvention of classics is the album's highlight.

From his cool take on Stevie Wonder's "All I Do" to his impressive spin on the Beatles' "Can't Buy Me Love," Brady's voice is pure and soothing. His cover of Sam Cooke's "A Change Is Gonna Come" is impeccable.

Brady works as a co-writer on four of the album's tracks. Three of those, "F.W.B.," "Back in the Day" and "I Ain't Movin'," are uptempo grooves that serve as the album's weaker moments. On the closing track, "You and Me," Brady tackles his recent divorce. The former Mrs. Brady may come back after hearing this one. MESFIN FEKADU (AP)

Wayne Brady isn't telling a hilarious joke in this picture — he's singing!

Luke Russert takes on a new role with gusto after his dad's death

FATHER'S SON | The reporter who sat across from John McCain and Barack Obama for separate interviews that aired on NBC's "Today" show was only 23. Was he nervous? "Not necessarily," Luke Russert said. "I had prior relationships with both of them."

No one would have figured on seeing a Russert on the "Today" show this political season, after the shocking death of Luke Russert's dad, Tim Russert, of a heart attack on June 13. Offered the chance to report on youth issues for NBC News, the gregarious young Russert dove into the assignment with gusto. Many of his stories have appeared on the "Nightly News" Web site, and he blogs about his experiences on ICue.com

"He's one of the rookies of the year," said NBC News President Steve

Capus. "Here's a man at the worst possible time in his life who stepped into the spotlight with great poise."

Would a young man at his age and with his credentials secure such a high-profile job if his last name wasn't Russert? Doubtful. But NBC News might be expected to act paternally toward a person its employees watched grow up beside its beloved Washington bureau chief and "Meet the Press" host.

He often accompanied his dad on assignments ("as a 10-year-old, I was as tall as Ross Perot," he recalled). The Russert name also undoubtedly helped land last week's interviews with the two candidates. "Everybody in the political world knows Luke Russert," Capus said. "Here is a guy who is going to get his calls returned." DAVID BAUDER (AP)

A Truly Different Drummer

GOODBYE | Earl Palmer, the session drummer whose pioneering backbeats were recorded on such classics as Little Richard's "Tutti Frutti" and the Righteous Brothers' "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'," has died. He was 84.

Palmer died Friday at his Los Angeles home after fighting a lengthy illness, said his spokesman, Kevin Sasaki.

Born in New Orleans in 1924, he later moved to Los Angeles and worked extensively in both cities, recording with some of the music world's all-time greats on thousands of tracks.

Earl Palmer was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2000.

His beats form the backdrop on Ike and Tina Turner's "River Deep, Mountain High," Fats Domino's "The Fat Man" and "I Hear You Knockin'" by Smiley Lewis.

From his Los Angeles home, Palmer drummed for music producer Phil Spector and Motown, and his session credits include artists as diverse as the Monkees, Neil Young and Frank Sinatra.

"He was groundbreaking," said Ed Vodka, the pianist in the Earl Palmer Trio. Palmer "shaped American music for the '50s, '60s and '70s."

Vodka said he met Palmer about 10 years ago and was asked to join the trio. The pianist said he spent the next five years playing weekly gigs in Los Angeles that attracted a host of big-name musicians, from Bonnie Raitt to Ringo Starr.

"He worked with so many people in his career. ... You never knew who would be in the audience," Vodka said.

Palmer was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2000. According to the institution's Web site, Little Richard wrote in his autobiography that Palmer "is probably the greatest session drummer of all time." (AP)

A New View of the Lake

Wobegon grudgingly greets some changes — and a stripper

DARING | Garrison Keillor's newest look at Lake Wobegon, "Liberty," is a bit racier than usual, or perhaps necessary, and chaotic in a beautiful way.

This time around, the July Fourth celebration has lost its zip, and celebration chairman Clint Bunsen tries to revive its flashier past. The bickering town committee is on him like piranhas.

Why two drum-and-bugle corps? Why $1,200 for the Leaping Lutherans Parachute Team? Did we need the Grand Forks Pitchfork Drill Team? The Sons of Knute were banned from marching — too pokey. Old Mr. Detmer, who had read the Declaration of Independence each year for 30-odd years, got the boot last year for refusing to delete the complaints against King George, to shorten it, to move things along.

Along the way comes Angela Phlame, a steamy bombshell and psychic who somehow filled in for Miss Liberty in last year's parade and is back for the job.

It is whispered quite loudly that Angela is a stripper. She and Clint had shared a chat room. They share Room 6 of the Gardens of Avon Motel.

Wholesome Americana will never grow old, but Garrison Keillor will.

Clint, a mechanic in the family's failing auto dealership, is a frustrated artist in a town where you top out at "pretty good" or go elsewhere to talk about it. He had dreams once and now does again with sweet Angela. His wife, in whose presence clocks may fail to function, shows up with a pistol.

But despite it all, Keillor writes, Lake Wobegon remains a town of "good, loving people who drive each other crazy." There is comfort in that. The regulars remain in the Chatterbox Cafe and the Sidetrack tap where we saw them last and where we'll find them next time.

Viggo Gets Trigger-Happy

Mortensen becomes one with his big old gun in 'Appaloosa'

FILM | Viggo Mortensen follows a classic cowboy code in the Western "Appaloosa": Speak softly and carry a big honkin' gun.

As an Old West lawman, Mortensen packs a booming eight-gauge shotgun in "Appaloosa," which reteams him with "History of Violence" co-star Ed Harris, who also directed and co-wrote the Western.

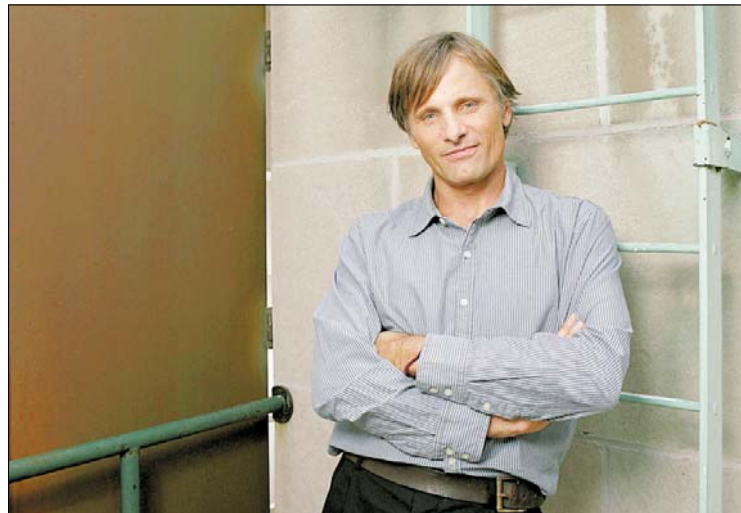

Adapted from Robert B. Parker's novel, the film is the story of two old trail buddies, Virgil Cole (Harris) and Everett Hitch (Mortensen), itinerant lawmen who sign on to clean up the town of Appaloosa, where a murderous rancher (Jeremy Irons) runs the show.

Cole and Hitch's efforts are complicated by the arrival of widow Allie French (Renee Zellweger), who begins a capricious romance with Cole.

Fifty inches long and weighing 11 pounds, the eight-gauge initially was a turnoff for Mortensen when shooting began for "Appaloosa."

"When I first had it, I said, 'Do you really need it to be an eight-gauge, Ed?" said Mortensen, 49.

"It's not that manageable; it's not going to be accurate at much distance. I said, 'I'm not going to shoot that thing off a horse, because I'd get blown off the horse, realistically.'"

After a day or two, Mortensen started looking at the eight-gauge as an ally, a handy reminder to bad guys that the law can always out-gun them.

At that point, Mortensen started lobbying for a bigger role for the gun, which sent dogs and horses running the first time he shot it outdoors and which rattled the windows and floorboards when he test-fired inside a saloon.

"Viggo handles props great, and he loves detail, so that thing was his baby," said Harris, who compared the eight-gauge to an elephant gun.

Who needs food? Rachel Zoe is fueled by Starbucks and a passion for her job.

Style, Sweat And Tears

Rachel Zoe's TV show exposes the efforts that go into the looks

BEHIND THE SCENES | There is no stylist more famous, influential or loathed than Rachel Zoe. She's an undeniable force in the industry and one of its most targeted size-0 figures. Routinely pounded in the media, she's been attacked as a celebrity hanger-on and champion of the skinny epidemic. Her looks are mocked online by bloggers such as Perez Hilton, who coined the nickname "Raisinface."

"There's really like this big laundry list of misconceptions," she says. "One, that I'm anorexic; two, that I starve people; three, that I give drugs to people to make them thin. And I would say that I'm a diva or that I'm this sort of very kind of tough, kind of heartless person."

She hopes to present her "real" self — "for better or for worse, crying with eyelash glue on my eyes, letting it all hang out" — in her Bravo series "The Rachel Zoe Project," which airs Tuesdays at 10 p.m.

Anyone who thinks stylists have it easy would do well to watch the first episode. The self-described workaholic lives in the fast lane, fueled by Starbucks coffee and an obsessive love of fashion.

"There are shake-ups and break-ups, and tears and laughs and all of that," said Zoe. "And we all work really, really hard. It's not a fluff job, and I think that people think it's a sort of glamorous, jet-setting job, and it's not. ... You really have to love it. And you have to want to live it."

Andy Cohen, Bravo's senior vice president of programming and development, called the show a "bull's-eye" for the cable channel, intersecting viewers' interest in fashion with the mystique of Zoe.

She's an "unwilling kind of divisive figure," Cohen said. "What I always knew about her was that people had strong opinions about her, but I never knew why. ... There's this image of her in the media as this sort of Starbucks-swilling beetle, and she has so much passion and energy and fun and light and love of fashion — and so much more."

ERIN CARLSON (AP)

A HIPSTER TO BALANCE OUT THE PREPS: The plot thickens on the CW's hot teen soap "Gossip Girl" with the addition of Wade Allain Marcus. Marcus has joined the drama as a recurring character, playing Max, a 19-year-old hipster photographer.

Television

Guess Who's Staying Forever

On 'Worst Week,' a girl, her boy and a ring meet the parents

BETROTHED | If last season was known for the writers strike, fall 2009 will probably be remembered as the year of the import. Like "The Office," the new CBS comedy "Worst Week" (9:30 p.m., CBS) offers an Americanized remake of a popular British series.

A comedy of constant humiliation, "Worst" seems to offer a serialized version of "Meet the Parents," and that's not a bad thing. Sam (Kyle Bornheimer) and Melanie (Erinn Hayes) seem like a cute couple. When Melanie discovers she's pregnant, they decide to inform her parents about their engagement.

Kurtwood Smith ("That '70s

CHEER UP! "Your father hates me. But other than that, things are perfect!"

Show") plays Dick, her stern and unfriendly father, an unsmiling judge who still refers to Sam as Melanie's "friend." Nancy Lenehan, who plays Earl's mom on "My Name Is Earl," moonlights here in a similar role.

It would be unfair to catalog all of the shameful pratfalls that Sam must endure in this pilot episode, but at least some include adult diapers, a trip to a funeral home and a radical misinterpretation of the use of a Crock-Pot.

Dependent on a continual cascade of crazy situations and contrived coincidences, "Worst" is hardly for every taste. But its emphasis on physical humor marks a welcome departure from the punch-line-driven yucks of shows like "Two and a Half Men." KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

CHA-CHA-CHA!

DANCING WITH THE STARS (8 p.m., ABC) enters its seventh season with a new set of contestants, including sleazy reality star Kim Kardashian, singers Lance Bass and Toni Braxton, actress/host Brooke Burke, chef Rocco DiSpirito, Olympic gold medalists Maurice Greene and Misty May-Treanor, Oscar-winning actress Cloris Leachman and retired NFL star Warren Sapp.

MAKING UP FOR LOST TIME

HEROES (NBC) returns with a clip-show recap (8 p.m.) and two episodes (9 p.m. and 10 p.m.) that promise to tie up loose ends, redefine characters and jump-start a franchise that got wobbly during last year's truncated TV season.

ONE-LINER CENTRAL

Charlie encounters a familiar face on the season premiere of TWO AND A HALF MEN (9 p.m., CBS).

HELLO, BOLLYWOOD!

The documentary SHOT IN BOMBAY

SHE'S NOT NICE, NOT CHARMING: But maybe Kim can move. Find out on ABC.

(9 p.m., Sundance) examines India's film industry.

COME ON, BABY, LIGHT MY FIRE

Alan's case against Big Tobacco pits him against an old flame on the season premiere of BOSTON LEGAL (10 p.m., ABC). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Music for Lollygagging

Jenny Lewis' new CD, 'Acid Tongue,' leaves a bland aftertaste

MUSIC | Not long ago, Starbucks discontinued the bulk of its music retailing. There was not, that I noticed, much of an outcry in response.

Nonetheless, Barnes & Noble stepped in to fill the void for fans of inoffensive pop with a series of compilations called "Sunday Music."

Having (full disclosure) worked for the company, I feel sufficiently qualified to define this invented genre. Sunday music is for reading the paper or savoring some sort of "skinny" espresso concoction. Sunday music is pleasant but won't distract you from your other leisure activities. Sunday music is Norah Jones.

For the bulk of her new album, "Acid Tongue," Sunday music is also Jenny Lewis.

"Black Sand" is an inexplicable

MELLOW COLD: Jenny Lewis serves up a light, tepid sampler on "Acid Tongue."

choice for an opening track, transitioning from merely boring to outright grating in less than three minutes. The unobtrusive instrumentation compels the listener to focus on Lewis' falsetto cooing, which is absurdly high in the mix.

Nearly as annoying is "Bad Man's World," featuring an equally narcotizing arrangement. As with "Black Sand," the vocals and the lyrics are underwhelming. She sings, "It's a bad

GET MORE of this review and hear some of Lewis' new music at Expressnightout.com man's world/I'm a bad, bad girl" followed by "mmmm" and what I can only describe as moaning. Maybe someone finds this nonsense seductive, but that person is probably picturing Lewis in hot pants.

Lewis is more palatable on "Acid Tongue's" upbeat tracks. The nearly nine-minute "The Next Messiah" exhausted my patience the least. It boasts a fuller, more country-influenced sound, and Lewis sounds more comfortable singing lower in her range.

"Acid Tongue" may briefly fill the mellow void for Norah Jones fans, but Sunday music doesn't inspire much fanaticism, and this album demonstrates exactly why. MEG ZAMULA

2 Thanks, Geoff

Let's face it: If you're reading this post, it's likely that you're not Bill Gates and might have some concerns about money. As in, you don't have an unlimited amount of it. That's what Chef Geoff—the pleasant-looking man in the picture—is here for. At his three restaurants—Chef Geoff's uptown and downtown, and Lia's in Friendship Heights—you can enjoy one of the city's finest (and most substantial) burgers for just $5 along with a discounted drink every day from 3 to 7 p.m. if you sit at the bar. Maybe Bill Gates will be there. K.E.

3 He's Going to Iota

The tale of members of a band getting jealous of a prominent front man, freaking out and causing a split is all too common, but it sounds like bassist Murry Hammond of alt-country band the Old 97's has a much more productive way of dealing. He has a side solo act instead of whining about Rhett Miller's getting more attention than he does. Hammond's album "I Don't Know Where I'm Going but I'm on My Way" has led him straight to stages across the country, including the one at our very own Iota. He'll be there Monday night to serenade us all on his own. K.E.

We'll Call It Bowie Mode

Listening to the Dandy Warhols makes me feel like I am trapped in a "Labyrinth" sound track that's wrapped in Depeche Mode that's at a classic rock concert. Who wouldn't want to be compared to David Bowie, Goblin King? Warhols front man Courtney Taylor-Taylor's voice has that same otherworldly, hypnotic quality. Also, they list the Stones as an influence. I have them pegged! They're at the 9:30 Club with Darker My Love and the Upsidedown. K.E.

THE HOLOCAUST BY BULLETS

Special Presentation by Father Patrick Desbois

Monday, September 22 7 p.m.

This event is free and open to the public. For reservations, please call 202.488.6162.

Helena Rubinstein Auditorium Valet parking available

100 Raoul Wallenberg Place, SW Washington, DC 20024-2126 Metro: Smithsonian (Blue/Orange Lines)

Using the Museum's archives to inform his search, Father Desbois, a French Catholic priest, is leading a historic undertaking to locate every unknown mass grave and site at which Jews were killed in Ukraine during the Holocaust.

This program marks the publication in English of his book The Holocaust by Bullets, produced by Palgrave Macmillan with the support of the Museum. Following his presentation, Father Desbois will sign copies, which will be available for purchase.

This program is supported by the Helena Rubinstein Foundation.

Dutch researchers watch people eat to learn about behavior

At the Wageningen University cafeteria in Wageningen, Netherlands, women linger longer than men over their lunch decisions. Given a choice, they tend to opt for meat labeled “animal friendly,” while men likely will go for a new product.

Cameras are watching them. From inside a control room, monitors record the customers’ movements, hesitations, facial expressions, posture, weight, even their eating habits.

It gives the scientists plenty to chew over. They study the influences on eating, how products can be made more appealing, and how to direct consumers to specific — perhaps healthier — choices.

Does it matter whether the cheese slices are wrapped in plastic? Whether the bread is presented as a loaf or sliced up? Whether the salad is on a red table or a blue one? Whether the soft drinks are by the entrance or by the checkout? Or where they stand in relation to fresh juices?

The $4.5 million Restaurant of the Future is run by scientists of Wageningen University and Research Center, working with Sodexo, an international catering firm, and the Noldus software company, to answer questions from the food industry and behaviorists.

“We think of ourselves as rational beings, always making the best choice,” says Rene Koster, director of the Restaurant of the Future Foundation. But that’s not true; 80 percent of our decisions are made subconsciously, he said, citing U.S. studies.

Research on consumer behavior has been around since spy marketing began. But with its spy machines, databases and battery of analysts, the Wageningen project, with 42 companies participating, is meant to take the study of eating to a level approaching rocket science.

Knowing how to subtly guide choices could have a huge commercial impact. About half of all food consumed in the United States is outside the home. That figure shoots up to 68 percent in Japan.

Companies are interested, of course, but so are public facilities. A hospital in Utrecht has asked for a project on the effects of a better meal or a change of dining surroundings on the well-being of its patients.

Schools want to know how to deal with young teenagers who throw away home-prepared food and lunch for potato chips and Coke.

The cafeteria is organized in a series of islands, each with a different food type, in what Koster called a free-flow system rather than the traditional long line serving everything. People feel they have a wider selection — and they tend to spend more money, he said.

The checkout is self-service. Customers punch in the dishes they chose on the touch screen and pay by card, ensuring that everyone’s eating habits can be tracked and

Food for Thought

Facial recognition software analyzes your level of enjoyment.

In the control room, technicians watch the action on individual screens and on a large overhead screen divided into quadrants.

“The first weeks are not very nice, but you get used to it,” said Vida Mohammadani, an employee on campus, adding that she no longer pays attention to the monitoring.

Researchers are just beginning to experiment after establishing the clientele’s baseline behavior since the cafeteria opened early this year. But they already are piecing together anecdotal evidence:

Put the same coffee in four mugs of different colors and ask people which is stronger. Men likely will point to a brown mug. Women are less likely to be fooled, Koster said.

For months, he said, customers bought milk from a vending machine. One day, the label was changed to indicate the milk was organic — prompting some people to comment that it tasted funny.

People eat more when food is served on a big plate, less on a small one.

And attitudes change when freshly cut flowers are on the table.

The TV Column

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to determine which circle of Dante's "Inferno" you'd have to land in to be subjected to "Do Not Disturb" on continuous playback, and to decide whether Tina Fey deserves an Emmy, a Nobel or a Sexist of the Year prize for her spot-on Sarah Palin impression on "Saturday Night Live."

On the "Do Not Disturb" producers: Instead of Dante, may I suggest you turn to Greek mythology, specifically the fate of Tantalus? He was stuck under a fruit tree up to his neck in water, and every time he'd reach for an apple, it would rise away from his grasp. And every time he'd try to get a drink, the water level would recede from him. Same thing for these guys, except that they're being forced to watch "Do Not Disturb" on a loop. And every time they reach for the remote to change the channel, it moves out of their grasp. Forever. Tantalus it is then. I just want to make it perfectly clear that watching "Do Not Disturb" comes with huge risks.

So, was Tina Fey born to skewer Sarah Palin, or was Sarah Palin born so that Tina Fey could skewer her?

I'm guessing we're going to see an investigative piece soon on the front page of some paper blowing the lid off the story that they are, in fact, identical cousins. Anyway, did you see that Tina Fey's "Saturday Night Live" spoof of Sarah Palin is now NBC.com's most-watched viral video ever, beating previous record holder "[Male pride] in a Box"? According to NBC, "[Male Pride] in a Box" has collected more than 1 million views on NBC.com, but Fey Does Palin had already bagged 5.7 million views as of Wednesday.

I used to watch all three "CSI" shows. Now I hate them with a passion. I love this David Caruso Day idea! Also, I saw a promo for "Grey's Anatomy" and I can't get over how bad that show has gotten. Is there anything like smart TV anymore? I've been watching earlier seasons of "Lost" and realized that the newer seasons can't really match up, except for a few episodes. Thoughts?

Glad you like David Caruso Day. And, in regards to "Grey's Anatomy" and "Lost" — maybe we need term limits.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Look for bargains when shopping, and try to consolidate your efforts and save money as you travel from place to place.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) This is a good day to begin improving your spending habits. Make no mistake about it: What you do now will surely affect your marketability later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) With the backing of someone with more practical experience, you are able to make a tricky financial decision — just in time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You can avoid interruptions and move solidly toward the accomplishment of an important goal. Money matters are highlighted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may not have a firm grasp of your own circumstances as the day begins, but key lessons can be learned on the spot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Emotional pressure may increase dramatically until you say what must be said and do what must be done to ease your burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Now, perhaps more than ever, you will be driven by an internal force you cannot resist. You can channel your energy in a creative vein.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Routine affairs may seem even less interesting than usual. Make no mistake, however: Your direct involvement is still necessary.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may enjoy increased energy and a renewed desire to fulfill a favorite dream. Start slowly. Increase the tempo gradually.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may have to be painfully honest with yourself in order to benefit from your own current circumstances. An important lesson can be learned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Avoid meaningless courtesies and gestures that are performed by rote. Be sure that your encounters with others are meaningful in some way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be patient with yourself when others are not meeting your expectations. Not everyone has the stamina or special skills you can boast of.
